PRESIDENT'S CORNER

What's Needed For Good Public Policy Discussions?

What makes government work? Now I am sure that for some this is a loaded question with answers ranging from “nothing” to a political science discussion worthy of a graduate school dissertation.

As one who works in a part of the world that is highly regulated by government and who works with government officials on a regular basis, my perspective is different from both of those approaches. We work with government on virtually every aspect of our business and are highly influenced by policy decisions made by government officials.

To me and to this organization, and indeed to virtually every insurer which must interact with its regulators, the need for ‘good and effective’ public policy decisions is not academic. It is necessary to our operations. The lack of good policy decisions costs each of us in time, resources and downright aggravation.

At the risk of stating the obvious, not every government decision, just like not every single decision by private industry, is always well thought out or correct. Mistakes, miscalculations and even hasty judgments happen both inside and outside of the public policy world.

Setting aside our mutual lack of perfection, at its core, good government policy decisions have something very much in common with what is touted as good private business decisions. In business, we describe this similarity as being a customer oriented organization. How will my decisions impact my customers, since without good products and good customer service any business can ultimately fail?

Government is designed to both fulfill the will of its citizens — to be “of, by and for the people” in the words its empowering documents — and to protect their well being. These simple principals, when correctly applied, drive a fundamental component of public policy debates on any number of issues.

Indeed these principals also mean that when decisions are made, a central question that must be brought to the table is just how the decision will impact the government’s ‘customers’, whether they are individual citizens or business citizens. Without the essential customer service component of decision-making, good public policy results are achieved only by chance.

In the area of workers’ compensation, government is routinely called upon to make any number of public policy decisions. For example, whenever the Legislature passes and the Governor signs a law modifying benefits that is a critical public policy decision impacting a vast variety of ‘customers’.

Such changes impact employees who are injured and indirectly their families. The decision impacts the employer who must fund the payment of the benefits, the insurer who pays the claim, and MWCIA which measures the loss costs of those benefits. It may also impact self-insurers, the Minnesota Workers’ Compensation Assigned Risk Plan, and the Reinsurance Association. Since all costs are ultimately passed onto customers of the employers or their insurers, it has an impact on the economy as a whole. Finally, there are those who argue that benefit levels might also indirectly impact medical service providers and the services they provide, as well as the severity or longevity of a claim.

These actual or even potential impacts mean that to make good public policy in this area there is a critical need for solid and credible information and data on just how changes might impact the workers’ compensation system, as opposed to anecdotal stories, approximations, or just plain old wives tales.

As Minnesota’s sole data service organization, we are keenly aware of both the need for and the importance of good and credible information in shaping these types of public policy debates and decisions. We collect vast quantities of information on the actual costs for medical and lost-time claims provided via workers’ compensation policies. We also work with the Minnesota Department of Labor & Industry, which tracks First Report of Injury data to monitor the fair and equitable treatment of injured workers.

Because we are the main storehouse of this data in Minnesota, MWCIA is routinely called upon to assist in public policy debates on changes to the workers’ compensation laws by providing as much data as we can to address the core question in those debates — how will any proposed change impact the government’s ‘customers’?

We are also aware that we cannot always answer all of the important questions in these debates because we do not have all of the necessary data. That is why MWCIA has decided to participate in a program developed by the Workers’ Compensation Research Institute (WCRI). WCRI was formed in 1983 to collect and analyze workers’ compensation data using recognized scientific methods and to make that data available for use by public policy makers and organizations such as MWCIA.

The program, called CompScope, now collects data in 20 states. It produces periodic studies and reports that may encompass issues within a single state or across many states. We will now have the ability to use CompScope studies or to expand our own internal research to meet the goal of providing good and credible data for public policy debates.

We are excited by this addition to our services not just because it expands our capabilities but because, in the long run, it will make the decisions made in Minnesota even better. That is good for all customers of government. ☺

[MWCIA Releases
2009 MN Ratemaking Report](#)

The 2009 Minnesota Ratemaking Report was released on August 12th. The new pure premiums, effective 1/1/09, reflect an overall average increase of 1.7% over 2008.

This change is based upon a review of the latest financial data experience for policy years 2006 and 2005 and accident years 2007 and 2006 which indicate a decrease of 0.4%. The effect of the change in minimum weekly benefits as of October 1, 2008 has been estimated to increase overall costs by 0.5%. The impact of Senate File 3218 effective October 1, 2008 has been estimated to increase overall costs by 1.6%. The experience change of -0.4% combined with benefit changes of +0.5% and +1.6% yields the overall indicated pure premium level change of +1.7%. This is the first increase in the pure premium level in six years.

The 2009 Minnesota Ratemaking Report is now available at no charge to member carriers on our website under Member Services at www.mwcia.org.

ASSIGNED RISK PLAN NEWS

ATTN: All Agents

[MWCARP'S ONLINE APPLICATION PROCESS \[OAR\] IS THE PREFERRED METHOD FOR SEEKING COVERAGE IN MINNESOTA'S ASSIGNED RISK PLAN](#)

Are you still submitting requests for Minnesota Assigned Risk coverage using hard-copy applications? This Spring, MWCARP's Online Assigned Risk (OAR) application program celebrated its first year in operation! As successful as MWCARP's Online Assigned Risk (OAR) application program has become, MWCIA's staff continue to receive hard-copy Assigned Risk applications on a daily basis.

Agents who use MWCARP's online OAR system to apply for Assigned Risk coverage in Minnesota have a definite advantage over agents who continue to submit requests for coverage using hard-copy applications. Not only are hard-copy applications a time consuming process for the agent; it is also a less efficient way for agents to provide good service to their clients.

Although MWCIA's staff pride themselves on the speed with which Assigned Risk submissions are processed [no matter what method an agent chooses to use], hard-copy applications require considerably more time to process. Not only does it take more time to process hard-copy applications, it takes longer for agents to receive notification that coverage was either bound or rejected because of the limitations of the United States Postal Service versus MWCARP's OAR online system.

For security purposes, each agent needs to go through a simple one time online process to register themselves and any additional staff (ie. assistants, etc.) they want authorized to use the same login/password information on OAR. Once the agent's login/password has been established, they can submit Assigned Risk applications confidently knowing that their clients' Minnesota Assigned Risk application information is secure.

The chart provided on page 5 of this issue of MWCIA News lists some of the advantages agents enjoy when submitting Assigned Risk applications online:

After looking over this chart, we're sure you'll agree that using the Assigned Risk Plan's OAR system for submitting applications online makes the most sense.

Still shy about using Assigned Risk's online system? Just call our office at 952.897.1737 (Option 2) and one of our Assigned Risk staff will be happy to walk you through your initial submission. ☞

New Registration Required for INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS

Effective January 1, 2009, all individuals in the commercial and residential building trades who consider themselves to be an independent contractor in the State of Minnesota will be required to obtain an Exemption Certificate from the Minnesota Department of Labor and Industry. General contractors who hire 'independent contractors' without an active Exemption Certificate must treat them the same as all other employees for workers' compensation insurance purposes as well as FICA, unemployment insurance, and federal and state withholding requirements so the ramifications of not complying with this new law can reach far outside the scope of workers' compensation insurance.

Because of the huge impact this new law carries for agents and other insurance representatives with clients in the construction industry, the Insurance Professionals of Greater Minneapolis has graciously arranged for a representative from Minnesota's Department of Labor & Industry to be the key speaker at an event being held on Tuesday, September 30th. The Department of Labor & Industry speaker will map out the logistics of this new program including how the Dept. is planning to implement the new registration requirements for both exempt and non-exempt individuals who apply.

This seminar is open to all interested parties who believe they could benefit from learning more about this new law including employers, their insurance agents, carrier representatives, attorneys, tax professionals and even property managers.

For your convenience, a copy of the registration materials has been attached to the end of this copy of MWCIA News. Space is limited so please register now to assure a seat. ☞

FYI For Our Members

Just a little note to advise membership that MWCIA staff has begun a study regarding paper processing of cancellations and reinstatements to give consideration to the possibility of charging a paper processing fee for these submissions at some time in the future.

Please note that we will provide more information to our members about this study as it becomes available.

Our Apologies!

MWCIA's 27TH
ANNUAL GOLF
EVENT cancelled

There's always a first time! As far back as memory serves, MWCIA's Annual Golf Outing & Social Event has always taken place. Sometimes through threats of rain; sometimes with a late start due to morning showers; and a few times we scrambled to start our social hour early because of sudden rainshowers. This year, however, on-going storm threats simply made it impossible to predict the day and the 27th Annual MWCIA Golf Outing & Social Event had to be cancelled!

MWCIA's Board and staff apologize for any inconvenience this caused our guests — especially those who travelled a distance to join us. We know that golfers understand just how fickle weather can be when it comes to their favorite sport, however, and we appreciated everyone's understanding.

We look forward to better weather next year and hope to see everyone again at MWCIA's 28th Annual Golf Outing & Social next summer!

REDESIGNED MWCIA WEBSITE IS ON ITS WAY!

MWCIA's staff is excited to announce we are in the final testing stages of a redesigned MWCIA website at www.mwcia.org. Here's a sneak peak at a couple of the new website's features:

CompAsk!

Instead of your typical website 'FAQ' section, CompAsk will answer the most popular questions recently received by MWCIA staff plus, perhaps, the most unusual. CompAsk will also be used as a proactive resource to provide answers to time sensitive questions such as seasonal occupation class codes and issues such as MCPAP enrollment; the Annual Ratemaking Report; the new rate schedule for Assigned Risk, etc. Our staff's ability to anticipate and respond to time sensitive questions will make CompAsk the place to find what you want to know when you want to know it!

Learning Center

The Learning Center will be a repository for past CompAsk Q&A's as well as the various seasonal questions staff has added. Items will be sorted by topic and there will be a search function. Additionally, the Learning Center will allow MWCIA staff to provide more detail on particular topics than is generally available by phone or in our initial CompAsk entry. And, if you're unable to find an answer to your question in the Learning Center archives, you can click on Ask a Question to get a quick and accurate response from a member of our staff.

MWCIA anticipates that the new website will be available early this fall. A formal announcement including further details regarding all of the new website's enhancements will be issued once a release date is established.

Although the look and feel of our website will be changing, please note that MWCIA's website address will remain the same. ↗

A note re: MWCIA Publications

MWCIA's 2007 Annual Report is now available online. It can be accessed by using the drop-down menu for PUBLICATIONS on the left-hand margin of MWCIA's homepage. Additional online publications include past issues of MWCIA News and an archive of MWCIA Circular Letters, as well as brochures on several topics of interest to the workers' compensation industry.

CONTRACTOR EXEMPTION CERTIFICATES

--The NEW Law--

Presented By:
Insurance Professionals of Greater Minneapolis
And
The MN Dept. of Labor & Industry

Effective January 1, 2009 all individuals in the commercial and residential building trades that consider themselves independent contractors, will be required to obtain an Exemption Certificate from the Minnesota Dept. of Labor and Industry. Independent contractors working without the Exemption Certificate will be considered employees of the general contractor. Because the law affects the employment status of independent contractors, the ramifications of not complying are far reaching. FICA, unemployment insurance, federal and state withholding requirements as well as workers' compensation coverage could be impacted.

A speaker from the Minnesota Dept. of Labor & Industry will map out the logistics of this new program. Learn who will be required to file for an Exemption Certificate, what information will be requested on the application, what provisions will create a rejection and ultimately who will be responsible for non-compliance. Exemption applications will be available. Please bring your questions and concerns! We hope to address both.
