PRESIDENT'S CORNER

By Bruce A. Tollefson

The Reason WHY!

Last year, my quarterly articles focused on the importance of organizations delivering "real value". I recently came across an article I had written shortly after I became President of MWCIA. Last year's articles focused on the 'what' and 'how' of our effort to deliver value. This article provides a valuable look back at 'why' we exist and the genesis for our mission today:

How to Understand Workers' Compensation Insurance!

One of the mysterious issues in this modern business world is workers' compensation. Sure, we all understand what it's for. Some of us have been its beneficiary. But who designs it and how anyone arrives at a price is something most of us consider just too confusing and complicated to delve into.

We are happy when rates go down, frustrated when they go up, but for most of us, that's the extent of our knowledge of this monthly obligation that affects nearly every worker in the nation.

A key to how this works in Minnesota's workers' compensation system is our organization, the MWCIA. But before I reveal what those letters stand for, a little history is in order.

An Impossible Situation

Before the 1900s, a worker seeking compensation for an injury had no recourse but to sue the employer for negligence. This was a bad - and often futile - endeavor. Most of the burden of proof was on the injured worker - and without the corroboration of co-workers (who risked being fired if they testified on his behalf), he had little prospect of proving his case.

To make matters worse, employers had three common law defenses against such lawsuits. Contributory Negligence could be invoked if it could be shown that the worker contributed to the accident in any manner.

Under the Fellow Servant Rule, an employee injured through the negligence of a fellow employee was barred from taking action against the employer and instead had to pursue his case against the co-worker.

Assumption of Risk Doctrine, perhaps the most comprehensive tool in the employer's defense, held that an injured worker could not pursue damages if it could be shown that he had acknowledged the risks associated with his job and accepted the job despite them.

These factors made it nearly impossible for a worker to sue an employer successfully. The mere attempt often led to dismissal, and so the ex-employee had neither a job nor the means of replacing his lost income.

Absolute Liability

It wasn't until the beginning of the last century that states began to adopt employer liability laws. While these changes greatly benefited workers, an injured worker still had to prove the employer negligent - a feat that in most cases was simply insurmountable.

Wisconsin was the first to respond to the call. In 1911, its legislation passed the first constitutionally acceptable workers' compensation law. Establishing the concept that an employer is responsible for paying benefits to an injured employee regardless of culpability, the law's only condition was that the employee, regardless of culpability, prove that the injury arose "out of and in the course of employment". These 'absolute liability laws', as they came to be known, actually provided protection for the employer as well since they outlined benefits and other important limitations that 'capped' costs in addition to providing 'no-fault' protection for injured workers.

In 1921, Minnesota established its own program. To collect the data necessary to assure adequate coverage and premium income, the new law specified that a ratemaking bureau be created by the insurers writing workers' compensation. That bureau was the predecessor of what we know today as the Minnesota Workers' Compensation Insurers Association - or MWCIA for short.

Over the next 60 years, the bureau solely fulfilled its obligation under state statute. Regulated by the Insurance Commissioner, it gathered information from its member companies, then analyzed that information to arrive at a schedule of final rates that all companies writing workers' compensation in Minnesota used to develop each covered employer's premium.

The Ratemaking Report

It wasn't until 1981 that significant changes occurred in the system. The Legislature transformed the MWCIA from a rating bureau to a data service organization, expanding its role to serve a variety of workers' compensation industry needs.

In the same session, the Legislature required the MWCIA to provide statistical data and support to insurance companies who, in turn, filed their own schedule rates based on the Ratemaking Report developed annually and filed by the Association.

While the Ratemaking Report serves as an excellent barometer for the health of the workers' compensation system, ongoing work and initiatives by other key players (the employer community, organized labor, the Minnesota Department of Commerce (DOC), the Minnesota Department of Labor and Industry (DOLI) and, of course the Minnesota Legislature) further assure the system's current and future well-being.

Working together, these entities played prominent roles as the Legislature drafted and passed major workers' compensation laws in 1992 and 1995 that:

- Required approval by DOC for all rates.
- Updated benefit schedules.
- Initiated managed care.
- Reshaped other important cost drivers.

As a result, Minnesota workers and employers benefit from significantly lower pure premium base rates - as much as 17.7 percent lower than 1984, when the Ratemaking Report was released.

It's a fairly simple equation: healthy workers make for healthy employers, which nourish higher levels of employment, which provides greater revenue to the state and its citizens through increased productivity and competitiveness.

Golf Outing 2010

After a two-year hiatus, MWCIA's staff and Board of Directors were delighted to bring back this annual MWCIA event. MWCIA's Golf Outing 2010 was met with enthusiastic players, wide smiles and near perfect golf (weather that is)! To all the golfers, special guests, and MWCIA staff who made this day such a resounding success --- 'Thank You'!!!

On July 21st, over 80 friends and colleagues of MWCIA and their guests gathered at the Crystal Lake Golf Course in Lakeville for a box lunch before our shotgun start. While most of the 20 foursomes on the course chose to play 'best ball', there were many other golf achievements of note . . . some laudable, some dubious, but all in the spirit of fun as guests celebrated spending the day with friends and colleagues -- old and new -- while enjoying a beautiful summer day in Minnesota.

After a day of golfing, guests gathered on Crystal Lake GC's patio deck overlooking their beautiful course where they enjoyed an excellent buffet spread while they relaxed, mingled with non-golfing guests, and swapped stories from their day on the course.

Since MWCIA's Annual Golf Outing is officially a non-competitive event, MWCIA's 'Awards Ceremony' included the 'awarding' of several golf-related prizes to recipients who were selected by random drawing.

Of course, MWCIA's 'Awards Ceremony' would not be complete without presentation of our now famous (and infamous) coveted MWCIA 'Master's Jacket' [aka a short pink fuzzy robe with golf motif appliqué]. This year's winner was none other than Brandon Miller who, having 'won' this honor previously, proudly donned this lovely garb for a second time. [Side note: This honor is not to be taken lightly as it is the responsibility of this year's owner to bring it back next year to present to the next honoree. Rumor has it that one recipient was so proud of this honor that he 'mounted' it on his office wall!] Congratulations, Brandon, on being a two-time winner and a good sport!

To those who have never attended MWCIA's Annual Golf Outing, we strongly urge you to do so next year. This annual MWCIA event provides members with the rare opportunity to spend the day golfing and soaking up some sun while building relationships with MWCIA Board members, MWCIA staff, state agency officials and their staff, and other industry folk. And, as part of this unique membership benefit, each member carrier is allowed to bring one guest [agent, colleague, client, or friend]. We are confident that you will find Crystal Lake's course, the refreshments, and the connections you are able to make throughout the day among the best of the best! ☞

Free Workshops For Minnesota Employers

The "Business & Employment Tax" Workshop sponsored by the State of Minnesota is an excellent source for information on State and Federal withholding, UI taxes, Social Security taxes, new hire reporting, State and Federal labor standards, and workers' compensation insurance requirements. There is also an expanded section on the new rules used to determine independent contractor status in Minnesota.

This full-day workshop/seminar rotates locations around the twin cities, it's FREE, and, attendees can repeat the workshop as often as they like to get clarification on new rules or just as a refresher.

Although it's designed for Minnesota employers, the "Business & Employment Tax" Workshop is well suited for anyone interested in learning more about the requirements of doing business in Minnesota.

MWCIA Educational Series:
Experience Rating – Claim Reporting & Valuation Dates

MWCIA's Educational Series provides staff an opportunity to clarify and/or review common topics involving workers' compensation policy writing. These articles are intended to provide agents and carriers with quick guide references rather than an in-depth discussion of a topic's nuances. This quarter's topic will cover an element of Experience Rating in more detail. The following provides a simple explanation of how the Valuation Date is determined and used in the experience rating process:

To review -- The 'rating period' of an experience mod establishes the range of policies included in a mod calculation and normally includes three complete years of policy data ending one year prior to the effective date of a mod. The date the value of each claim is established by an insurance company's claim department is called the 'valuation date'. This date is always 18 months after the effective date of a policy regardless of its expiration date or whether or not a claim is closed or open.

The total claim value reported for each claim incident must include all medical and indemnity payments. For open claims, the total claim value must also include reserve amounts for the medical and/or indemnity portions of the claim to establish its full value. And claims that are intended to be either subrogated or ruled non-compensable must be reported at an estimated total value as of the valuation date. In other words, the claims department is obligated to report the total value of all claim incidents as of the valuation date of each policy regardless of their final status.

Each year the claims department will review the status of all open/unresolved claims as of the 'valuation date' for each policy. As long as the policy year is included in the calculation of an experience mod, the new claim amount reported as of the annual valuation date will be updated in the new rating calculation.

Agent's Tip: Claims personnel typically review claims at routine intervals that are established based on the date of each claim rather than their reporting date. Since experience mods are calculated according to policy dates and the data reported for the mod calculations are reported at a date that is initially established 18 months after the claim date, it is recommended that agents and their clients review all open claims with claim department personnel prior to the established valuation date. Agents who follow this method report greater success in helping their clients keep the actual claim amounts reported by their insurance companies on open claims, including the closing of claims prior to their valuation date, as low as possible.

For a complete explanation of Experience Rating, please refer to the Minnesota Experience Rating Plan Manual. MWCIA has also created a brochure on this topic. Both items are available online at www.mwcia.org under the Forms/Manuals/Publications tab. ☞
